has the lowest government grant to expense ratio and that all CMOs, with the exception of one, do not break even on government funding, alone. Chris then explained the development/communications department differences among the CMOs, including that many CMOs are realizing that it is cost-effective to have a development department.

- The board then discussed the SWOT analysis portion of the audit. Larry reminded the group that it is best to keep in mind the difference between common practices and best practices, especially when analyzing what other organizations are doing. Greg followed the discussion by asking if Bob would use the audit to inform his work going forward. Bob stated that the audit would help inform our strategic plan, and the work that each department does.
- David stated that the audit is a great benchmark study, and several board members agreed.
